What Does Affirmative Action for Veterans Mean?

Since The Ohio State University contracts with the U.S. Government, the university is required to take affirmative action in employment and advancement in employment of qualified veterans.

- This obligation specifically requires:
  - Outreach and positive recruitment
  - Internal dissemination of policy and intent
  - Advancement in employment
  - Reasonable accommodations for the disabled
  - Documentation practices and accomplishments
  - Annual filing of the VETS-100 report on veterans' employment

The Department of Labor does not require the university to hire any particular applicant or to hire from any group of applicants. However, as a part of the posting process, Employment Services in the Office of Human Resources publishes a list of newly created positions and vacancies, and these are filed with the State Job Service (Ohio Bureau of Employment Services).

Affirmative action requires that the university take positive steps to enable targeted veterans to be considered for employment opportunities.

The university's personnel practices are reviewed to ensure that currently employed veterans are carefully considered for all promotion, training and retention opportunities.

Affirmative action applies to all employment practices such as:

- Recruitment
- Hiring
- Upgrading
- Demotion
- Transfer
- Layoff
- Termination
- Rate of pay
- Other forms of compensation
- Selection of training
- Job assignment
- Accessibility
- Working conditions

Since The Ohio State University is a federal contractor who has entered or will enter into subcontracts with other businesses in the amount of $10,000 or more, the affirmative action clause must be included in their subcontracts.

The staff of The Ohio State University's Employment Services is eager to help supervisors and administrators fulfill their responsibilities.

Employment Services gathers information about job applicants, including:

- Education
- Work experience
- Licenses
- Certification
- Shift restrictions
- Availability

Employment Services administers all pertinent examinations for civil service positions at the University. Qualified applicants are referred for your hiring consideration.

Any veteran covered by the law is encouraged to self identify for purposes of affirmative action with Veterans Affairs at The Ohio State University. The form can be found online at http://hr.osu.edu.
